

The Alan Turing Institute

Data science for experimental design

17 October 2018

Conference goal

Bringing together laboratory scientists (especially biologists), data scientists, and social scientists to explore how data science will transform the laboratory of the future.

Discussion

- How can we use data science to design informative laboratory experiments?
- How will robotic laboratories shape the future of experimental research?
- How can we make research more reproducible?

Register at:

datascienceforexperimentaldesign.github.io